Grasshoppers To Be Subject Calgary Meet

Larger Area Affected Than in 1933—Plan For Campaign

Alberta's grasshopper situation as it has reference to next seasons crop areas, the extent of infestation, and control measures measures to be adopted, will be the subject of a conference of officials to be held at Calgary, February 9. H. L. Seemanns, Dominion entomologist, stationed at Lethbridge, and the field staff, and E. L. Gray, provincial field crops commissioner, who directed the campaign last year, with his field men, will be in attendance.

Preliminary estimates show that about 5,000,000 acres of crop land will be effected in the southern part of the province next spring, compared with about 3,500,000 crop acres in 1933. Last season the damage done by the grasshoppers in Alberta was only about 11 per cent, about 45 percent of the crop in the area affected being saved. In other words, something like 56 percent of the crop would have been lost had it not been for the active control measures but into effect.

The area already infested for next season now reaches as far as the Convent line of the C. P. R., and west from the Saskatchewan border as far as Macleod Calgary line of the C. P. R., and the Calgary-Mirror line of the C. N. R. In the northern part of this area the heavily infested centers on Drumheller, running from Acme to Hanna and south from Runnymede to Gleichen. In the south, the heavily infested districts run from the Champion south to near the border, and from Macleod east to Chin. There is also a small heavily infested area just north of Pincher Creek.

Alberta is exceedingly fortunate compared with the northern States and Saskatchewan, states E. L. Gray, field crops commissioner. A recent circular reveals that in the eight northern States 14,000,000 acres of crop land are severely infested with grasshopper eggs that they not only endanger the entire crop production in these States, but threaten crops in neighboring States and Provinces. In Saskatchewan the infestation spreads over approximately 20,000,000 acres of land, which of course is not all crop land.

Our situation is not any worse than last year. Infestation may affect more districts, but the density has decreased. The Alberta campaign in 1931 and 1932 were the most effective on the North American continent, due considerably to the excellent co-operation the government had in its control measures from the Dominion field men, the municipalities and the farmers themselves. A total of 173 million pounds of poison bait was distributed within a few weeks last year at a time when the young hoppers were most effectively dealt with by poison. The Alberta situation is not hopeless by any means, and given average weather conditions, average rapidly and strength of crop growth, full co-operation as in the past from farmers and municipalities, and others, the situation can be easily taken care of.

Full arrangements have been made by the provincial department for the laying of the supplies for next seasons campaign. The use of oil in the mixing of poison bait will be a new feature this year as a result of successful

Believed Drowned in Titanic, Woman Restored to Family

Montreal, (C. P.)—Believed by her family to have drowned in the sinking of the Titanic 22 years ago when more than 1,500 lives were lost. Mrs. Lizzie Gray Buchanan is to be restored to them when she journeys to Scotland in a few months.

Through a misunderstanding Mrs. Buchanan's family thought she was on board the ill fated vessel, while she was safe in Montreal. Mrs. Buchanan changed her address about this time and so did her relatives in Scotland. Letters were sent to the dead letter office.

There are three brothers and three sisters in Glasgow.

Colonel Vanduzee was son in law of Mr. and Mrs. R. Peyton. Mr. Peyton and daughter, Miss Julia also Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Peyton attended the funeral.

Exports of milk and cream have been so reduced by restrictions placed on their entry into the United States that they are now negligible.

Experiments conducted recently. Poison bait mixed by water has been found to dry out too rapidly, and a good deal is wasted in this way. The use of oil will prevent this waste.

Intolerance

Experience is a great teacher, and the world is learning many things from this period of financial and economic difficulty through which it is passing. In the process of learning, it is, of course, not only absorbing new ideas and accepting new standards but it is abandoning old ideas and methods. The world is losing certain things it can well afford to lose; the loss of which can indeed be set down as gain. The danger is, however, that it will lose other things which it can ill afford to lose, and may accept and adopt things which will spell loss and disaster in the future.

Signs are by no means lacking that one of the greatest losses which the world of mankind may suffer as the result of the times through which we are struggling is the loss of much of the political liberty gained through centuries of persistent striving and battle. In one European country after another dictatorships in government have been set up in varying degrees and in somewhat different forms, but the effect in every instance is to deprive men and women of much of the political liberty and rights of citizenship they formerly enjoyed. One or two individuals, or a small group, backed by force are imposing their wills upon tens of millions of people.

Acceptance by people in many countries of these dictatorships is one of the phenomena of this age. It appears to be the outcome, not of one only, but of several reactions to the experiences through which people are passing. In the first place, many individuals have lost confidence in themselves and in their own abilities to manage their affairs and order their lives. With this loss of confidence there is, of course, loss of ambition and initiative. They are willing to throw up their hands, and let some other person, or group of persons, do their thinking for them and plan and manage their lives and life's activities. In a word, they have reached the stage where all they ask for is a bare material existence, and they want that without any effort on their part or even the trouble of thinking and planning how it may be obtained.

The second contributing factor to the phenomena we are witnessing is Fear. In the individual this is the outcome of the lack of confidence already noted, and it finds expression in public opinion throughout the State in doubts as to the ability of national institutions to withstand any attack that may be made against them. Thus the aspiring dictator who arises and proclaims his ability to handle the situation if only everything is left to him for decision and all necessary power is reposed in him for action. He promises quick action, decisive action, as contrasted with the slower, more moderate methods of democratic government. And because people are obsessed by Fear and weakened by a loss of confidence in themselves, they supinely bow before the dictator, or grasp at the glowing promises of a man or a group who, in reality, are no greater, wiser, more competent or far-seeing than they are themselves.

More deep rooted is the third cause of this present day phenomena. It reaches back into the ages of the past, the dark ages of the world. At recurring periods in the world's history it rears its ugly head. It is intolerance. It is never wholly absent but always slumbering in the breasts of mankind, ready to flare up at almost any provocation. It caused the great religious wars of the past; it caused the great racial struggles; it is deep rooted in social and economic struggles. Demagogues and dictators play upon this weakness in man. It is a brand they always use wherewith to start the fires of revolution.

The world to-day is witnessing a resurgence of intolerance. There was much of it during the Great War; in fact, it was cultivated by all the warring nations in order to spur on their people in the waging of that titanic struggle. The world is paying the price of that folly now. It bedeviled the Peace Conference; it has been the crippling factor in the councils of the League of Nations. It has resulted in narrow nationalism on the part of the nations; ever increasing armaments; every conceivable kind of trade-restricting device; in prohibitions, embargoes, quotas; in immigration prohibitions; in class struggles everywhere.

The Socialist-Communist leaders of Russia are determined to drive all Christian religion out of that great land because they are intolerant of everything but their own particular theory. Hitler and his followers are equally grim and determined against the Jews. Mussolini will brook no opposition to his own views and methods and rides roughshod over all who oppose him. And people everywhere who have sustained losses and are in difficulty because of the world depression, instead of looking to the basic cause, unthinkingly follow would-be leaders who intolerantly point to others who still possess some property as the people who are responsible for all the difficulties, losses and sufferings of others.

The world is going to lose much of the selfishness which has grown up in and around present day business, and such loss will be gain. But is it also, through intolerance going to lose that liberty for man which has been won at such a great price? Is it true that man can only achieve a larger measure of material and economic comfort at the price of the loss of his spiritual and intellectual liberty and, in some measure at least, of his economic, social and physical liberty as well?

Intolerance may maintain dominance over men's minds for a time, but it will be but a temporary ascendancy, finally subsiding to flare up again at some future date. But during the period of its ascendancy it will work havoc, as it always has done. It will not, and never has, made for progress or happiness; it has only intensified the sorrows and troubles of the world always. Man needs to be on his guard against acceptance of any of its manifestations.

It will cost $5,615,595 next year to operate the Royal Canadian Mounted Police force, the same figure as this year. It was shown in the financial estimates tabled in the house of commons. The total includes pay, clothing and allowances for the men, arms and ammunition, building and repairs to barracks, purchase of horses and dogs, and all items down the line to stationery and printing.

A Coveted Honour

Manitoba Horticulturist Develops New Type Of Lily

Another popular assumption has been shattered by a doughty champion from the West. While public opinion has identified Eastern Canada more or less as the hub of floral plant breeding in the Dominion, the winning of a highly-prized and signal honour by a Manitoban at the world's great horticultural centre, the Royal Horticultural Society at London, England, has once more directed attention to the long list of champions emanating from Western Canada. A coveted honour, the Cory cup, has been awarded to Mr. F. L. Skinner, Dropmore, Manitoba, for breeding a new variety of lily which he has named the Maxwell. The cup is awarded to the originator of the best new hardy plant of garden origin shown to the society during the year. The Maxwell lily was exhibited last July in London, and the presentation of the cup will be made with due ceremony at the next annual meeting of the society this month.

Service Is Popular

Montreal-Albany Air Service Is Showing Constant Expansion

Regular daily aircraft operations between Montreal and New York have concluded their fifth calendar year with a grand total of 2,388 passengers and 171,784 pounds of mail flown from St. Hubert Airport to those at Albany and Newark. These figures indicate an average of forty passengers per month, and 2,863 pounds of mail over the entire period, but some measure of the increasing popularity of this service may be obtained from the monthly reports for last year, which show that the average passenger carryings were 53, and that five thousand pounds of mail left Montreal each month.

These figures would have been even higher, it was explained by H. O. Young, general manager of Canadian Colonial Airways, if the exceptionally bad weather experienced since the end of October had not occasioned so many cancellations.

Despite unfavorable flying conditions in November and December aeroplanes of Canadian Colonial Airways carried a record quantity of mail southbound during the past 12 months, amounting to 59,370 pounds. At fifty letters to the pound this would indicate a total of three million letters.

Probe Building Industry

Appointment of Federal Government Commission Is Urged

Appointment of a federal government commission to investigate the building industry was urged in a resolution passed at the final session of the Canadian Construction Association, completing a three-day convention in Toronto.

The purpose of the commission, the resolution indicated, would be to maintain a more even level in the industry, abolishing the wild fluctuations through which it now moves from year to year.

The government was asked in a resolution to appoint someone from the association to sit with the government in all deliberations about unemployment relief insurance.

W. H. Yates, Jr., of Hamilton, was elected president. Col. W. A. Foster, of Vancouver and Cecil Gunn, of Winnipeg, were elected western vice-presidents.

Asking Too Much

The manager called his office boy into his room and indicated his desk. "Look at this," he said sharply. "It is disgraceful! Why can't you keep it cleaner and polished as you do the banister rail outside?" The boy shook his head artfully. "Well, sir," he replied, not in the least put out. "I can't very well slide down your desk."

Milngavie, Scotland, has abandoned its street cars and is seeking government permission to operate trolley buses.

Receives First Air Mail

Related Christmas Gifts Delivered At Copper Mine, N.W.T.

Winter isolation of the little post of Copper Mine on Canada's Arctic shore was broken January 25 with the arrival of the first air mail it has received.

The mail machine, piloted by Walter Gilbert, of Canadian Airways, hero of a sensational dash to the magnetic pole three years ago, brought 600 pounds of mail, including 8,200 "first flight" covers for collectors from all parts of the world. Accompanying the shipment was Postal Superintendent Walter Hale, of Edmonton. Third man in the machine was Low Parmenter, air engineer.

Mail and belated Christmas gifts from "outside," were distributed by Rev. J. Morris, Anglican missionary, who was sworn in as postmaster. Meanwhile, Parmenter, working in the shelter of a special igloo constructed by willing Eskimo hands to house the nose of the big Junkers plane, checked over the motor in readiness for the return flight.

The new post office serves traders and trappers over a strip of Arctic coast 1,000 miles in length.

Not Entirely New Idea

Question Of Relief Was Vital Matter Many Years Ago

W. L. Clark, in Border Cities Star says the question of relief is not something that has been sprung on us within the last four years. Quite true, it has been a much greater problem recently, but it was a vital matter long before that.

We read that the late J. F. Cairns, formerly of Chatham and later leading merchant of Saskatoon, twenty years ago donated ten per cent. of the cash receipts of his store for two days to charity in Saskatoon. Curiously enough, on the day Mr. Cairns made his announcement twenty years ago, wheat sold in Saskatoon for 68 1/2 cents per bushel, which is within a few cents of the current price.

Canadian Composer

Celebrated Contralto Sings Songs Composed By Montreal Man

Sigrid Ongrin, celebrated contralto, is proud to have in her repertoire a song written by the Canadian composer, Emiliano Renaud, of Montreal, whose works, she believes, will be famous in years to come. "I was in Switzerland five years ago," she began, telling the story of her first meeting with him in the course of an interview, "and one day I received a great pile of music from this Emiliano Renaud, who said he was an admirer of my voice. My accompanist and I went over the music and found some songs of rare beauty. I at once learned them and sang them for the first time on my next visit to Montreal."

Cost Of Municipal Government

The cost of municipal government in Canada in 1932 exceeded that of any previous year, according to a report of the Citizens' Research Institute, made public recently. In that year the per capita cost was $54.74, as compared with $53.12 in 1931, $50.63 in 1930 and $47.37 in 1929.

Toronto was third on the list with a per capita cost of $64.61, behind Victoria with a cost of $90.95, and Edmonton with $89.51.

More progress will be made by cutting down guns than by gunning out laws.

Predicts Second Slide

Geologist Advises People At Frank, Alberta, To Move

Warning that the railroad, highway, telephone lines and homes of people in the valley should be moved, Dr. J. A. Allan, geologist at the University of Alberta, declared that a second slide is possible at Frank, Alberta.

"Three million cubic yards are definitely preparing to give way on Turtle mountain," he said. He declared that it was useless to attempt to dynamite sections but to clear the area "and let nature take its course."

Between 85 and 90 persons died in the slide, which occurred on April 29, 1933.

Dr. Allan said that he spent some time last summer in examining the mountain and found new fissures, some of them 40 feet wide and hundreds of feet deep, and giving off peculiar noises.

No Danger From Gases

Deadliest Kind Can Never Be Used In War

By getting into a hot bath the average person would be almost completely safe during a wartime gas attack, Dr. Francis Freeth, of the headquarters staff of the Imperial Chemical Industries, Ltd., said in a lecture at London.

Dr. Freeth ridiculed popular fears of poison gas as a war weapon. The deadliest gases, he said, can not be used in a war.

The only effective military gas, Dr. Freeth declared, is mustard gas, the value of which is now ended, he said, since complete defensive measures have been discovered.

Wonderful Jewel Display

Costly Stones Seen At Birmingham Jewellers' Annual Ball

An astonishing display of jewels took place at the first annual ball of the Birmingham jewellers. Many single pieces of jewellery on view were worth more than $30,000 each. There were diamonds as big as dime, black and fire opals, emeralds, rubies, amethysts, topaz, and pearls set in platinum and gold rings, brooches and necklaces. The jewels, which were worn by England's loveliest mannequins, were worth altogether about $750,000. Mingling among the guests were armed detectives dressed in immaculate "tails."

World production of boots and shoes in the first half of 1933 was 675,000,000 pairs, an increase of 20 per cent. over the first six months of 1932.

Through traffic on the Peking-Mukden railway in China has just been resumed.

SYNOPSIS

Camilla Hoyt and Peter Anson, young and in love, marry secretly, deciding to live their own lives apart until Peter is able to provide for her. Peter is a young, struggling sculptor trying to win a competition for a scholarship abroad and Camilla is the adopted daughter of a wealthy family. She is not to inherit money when she comes of age and so is studying commercial art in the hope of landing an agency job. Others in the story are Avis Warth, another wealthy girl who is trying to win Peter, Sylvia Todd, Peter's model, and Gus Matson, his former roommate with whom he has quarreled. At a party at an exclusive club Peter entertains Camilla's guests with impersonations. When the rest of the members of the party go to a cabaret to continue the gaiety, Peter and Camilla slip off to the beach by themselves and fall asleep on the sand. When they awake it is early morning and Avis and another boy are standing near them. This makes it necessary for Camilla to announce before the party that she and Peter are married. Avis is stunned and Camilla's mother likewise. Camilla decides that she must have the home of her adopted parents immediately and go to live with Rose, her sister, who is a file clerk in a business house. They decide to take an apartment. Bowman and Weeks, an advertising agency, where Camilla has submitted some of her work, send for her and tell her they have a new account which requires unusual treatment of juvenile art. To Camilla's surprise she learns that the account is that of her foster father's company, which has decided on an extensive campaign to bolster up lagging business.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER XXIX.

Camilla's first thought was to rush to Peter with the news. Then a second one assailed her—what if she failed? Could she admit that? No, she was riding the crest of the wave of excitement now—or was she riding in the clouds again, she wondered glidingly, as she guided her car by instinct and habit through the lanes of traffic. It behooved her to come down to earth, forget her own reactions and breathless hopes, and consider seriously the problem before her.

"Yes?" she called impatiently.
"Will you answer the telephone, Miss Camilla?"
"Who is it?"

"Mr. Anson calling. I thought you might—"

"Why, of course, I didn't include Peter when I said I wasn't at home to anyone," she laughed.

"I thought you didn't," Bates grinned slyly. He never smiled in anyone's presence save Camilla's.

"Hello, Lovable," Peter's sunny voice greeted her. "What are you doing?"

"Oh, don't ask me, darling, because I can't tell you now, please."

"Is that so? Why not, I'd like to know?"

"It's a surprise—a nice one. And if you ask me another question, I shan't be able to keep the secret, Peter. What are you doing?"

"Well, that's a surprise, too," he bantered, "but I just finished it and now I want to see you. It has been three days—or didn't you know?"

"I thought it was three weeks, but I may be wrong. But darling, I can't see you now."

"Soon, then," he insisted. "Meet me at Charm Cottage for dinner at six. I want to look at something beautiful and talk to something sweet."

"Oh, Peter, I'm so sorry, but I can't. I'm terribly busy and can't be disturbed at all tonight."

Her heart yearned to say "yes" and meet him eagerly and share that sweet pleasure of dining with him at Charm Cottage—where they had shared their wedding dinner. Here, already, was where her career stepped in and demanded first consideration.

Perhaps if she explained to him, it would help. No—she had to take a chance that Peter would understand. Perhaps, after all, a test of his faith. But her doubt reproached her.

"Busy—at what?" he inquired with dismay.

"Work."

"Did you get a position?" quickly.

"No—not yet." It was so difficult not to tell him about it.

"Well, then, there's tomorrow and all the other tomorrows for you."

"No, Peter, I can't see you, tonight, firmly."

"When—then?" he asked, after a moment of silence, and his voice sounded desolate.

She clung to her resolution and thought rapidly. If—something definite should be decided tomorrow, she could have dinner with him and tell him the wonderful news. Probably, there would be no decision even for days after she submitted her drawings. Even so, it would be wonderful to see Peter, and she would have to try to keep her secret from him.

"Make it tomorrow," she said. "And I'm awfully sorry about tonight, dear."

"May I stop in for a few minutes, then, later?" anxiously. "You're not ill?"

"Oh, no, dear. And please don't stop in. I do want to see you awfully much—but I can't."

"Okay, then. Tomorrow at six."

"Goodbye, Peter."

"Bye, Lovable."

She put down the telephone regretfully, at missing for a moment, then rose quickly and returned to her work. "If you're a good sport, you'll play this game by the rules you laid out when you invented it. Your and Peter's careers come first—marriage second, for awhile. Peter has been splendid about it all. Now, don't you give in at the first test." She gave herself a little shake of impatience and returned to her drawing board to lose herself again in the make-believe world which her imagination had created for her this day.

She had dinner, also, alone in her room. For one thing, she did not wish to face those stern, probing eyes of her foster father, yet, with this new secret in her heart. It had been different about the secret she had shared with Peter. That was hers alone. This matter concerned her benefactor vitally, and she feared for the effect of his influence upon her work, if he saw him now.

Besides, she wished to remain alone until her plan had been worked out. So she had a light dinner alone, practised a series of calisthenics to relieve her taut muscles and resumed work.

She was amazed when the pert little clock on her desk chimed a musical midnight, and increased her effort. The work had to be finished before morning. Inside the house and out, the stillness grew heavier, like the darkness. Muffled traffic sounds from the street were diminished until there was only an occasional brief whirr-r of a passing automobile. A truck rumbled past. Only the little clock kept insisting that the night was passing and trying to remind her every quarter hour how late it was. Three o'clock. Camilla toiled on, steadily.

After a long interval of intense silence, she was startled suddenly by the sound of a stopped motor and soft thudding of quick footsteps in the driveway. Her heart seemed to stop beating as a cold fear gripped her for an instant. Thumps in the rear of the house. She relaxed, laughing shakily to herself. The milkman, of course. It was the silence and weariness and her long concentration that had caused her to be frightened so foolishly.

At four o'clock, she looked up in surprise to discover that the windows were pale grey squares of light. A rose light crept into the room, and presently it was dawn. At six o'clock, she stopped work and surveyed her efforts. Tired as she was, a thrill of pleasure possessed her. She arranged the cards in her portfolio, stripped and slipped into a hot tub. Then she slept for two hours and awoke at the regular time for breakfast.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

TO MY MOTHER

You, who have never faltered, Once through the changeable years, You, who have never failed me, Whether in joys or tears, You, who have soothed each sorrow, Who have assuaged each ache, What can my poor toil offer Fit for your heart to take?

Just as your love is flawless, Steadfast and not of earth, It will endow my efforts Out of its own vast worth; So I dare bring you daily Work of my faulty hand, Certain your love's perfection Ever will understand!

Feed For Average Flock

The amount of grain and mash a flock of birds will eat in a week will vary with the flock and with the season. Some flocks will eat more than others. On the average, however, in a week's time, fifty White Leghorns would eat about fifty pounds of grain and about an equal amount of mash in the fall and winter. In the late spring and summer birds may be encouraged to eat more mash than grain by cutting down the amount of scratch that is fed.

After all, it is favorable commentary on human nature that the year's busiest shopping season is a result of a general desire to find one's own pleasure in somebody else's

Little Helps For This Week

"My presence shall go with thee, and I will give thee rest." Exodus 33:14.

"Thou wilt show me the path of life, in Thy presence is fullness of joy, at Thy right hand are all pleasures for evermore." Psalm 16:11.

They presence fills my mind with peace, Brightens the thought so dark erewhile, Bids cares and sad foreboding cease, Makes all things smile.

—Charlotte Elliott.

How shall we rest in God? By giving ourselves wholly to Him. If you give yourself by halves you cannot find rest; there will ever be a lurking disquiet in the half which is withheld. Marys, confessors and saints have tried this rest, and counted themselves happy in that they endured. A countless host of God's faithful servants have drunk deeply of it under the daily burden of a weary life; dull, commonplace, painful or desolate. All that God has been to them he is ready to be to you. The heart once fairly given to God with a clear conscience, a fitting rule of life, and a steadfast purpose of obedience, you will find a wonderful sense of rest coming over you.—Jean Nichols Grou.

South Africa Confident

Governor-General's Speech At Opening Of Parliament Optimistic

A new note of confidence and relief at the prosperity arising from the country's healthy financial position was observable as the Union parliament of South Africa opened a new session with the usual ceremonial Observers foresee a certain budget surplus and reduction of taxation accordingly.

The speech from the throne read by Lord Clarendon, governor-general, was couched in an optimistic tone throughout. It referred to the improved agricultural position following the breaking up of the long drought and declared unemployment had eased markedly as farmers who had left their farms to seek employment elsewhere were returning to the land.

The Coalition government under Premier P. B. M. Hertzog and General Jan Smuts, erstwhile leader of the opposition, has an overwhelming majority in the house following the general elections of last year. Formal fusion of the two main parties in South African politics is nearly complete.

A very stout man was walking on the promenade of a seaside town when he noticed a weighing machine with the notice—"I speak your weight."

He put a penny in the slot and stood on the platform. A voice answered, "One at a time, please!"

"If you try to kiss me, I shall scream!"

"Not with all these people about, surely?"

"Let's find a quieter spot, then!"

Why Punish The Baby

Both President Roosevelt and the National Industrial Recovery Act which he sponsored are commended in the name bestowed upon the infant daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Jefferson Myers, Alquippa. A letter from a presidential secretary conveyed the president's "very best wishes for the health and happiness" of the girl, who was christened Nirvalet Myers.

Edmonton Retail Merchants Ass'n Upholds Stevens

Edmonton, Feb. 1 (C. P.)—Enthusiastically endorsing the statements of the Hon. H. H. Stevens, minister of trade and commerce, who in a recent speech at Toronto, condemned unfair business practices and charged that they were prevalent in Canada, Edmonton members of the Alberta Retail Merchants' Association, met here on Wednesday.

It was decided that a mass meeting of all retailers in the province would be held in this city on February 13, 14 and 15 and it is expected that more than 1,000 merchants, representing every city, town and village in the province will be present.

"We have been trying for years to get recognition for the retailer at Ottawa," said A. C. Mackay, secretary of the Alberta association, "and now I think the door is gradually opening. Every retailer in this province is solidly behind the Hon. Mr. Stevens."

Here and There

The first event in the celebration of the Centennial of the City of Toronto, to be held this year, took place at the Royal York Hotel in the closing week of 1933 when Mayor Stewart handed out keys of the "Centennial" to a large crowd of interested recipients.

A tip for the encouragement of the younger ski generation is given by the Canadian Pacific Railway in the company's inauguration of a special school age ski excursion at low rates to the Laurentians just outside Montreal. The special was heavily patronized by the youngsters.

Statistics recently issued by the Bureau of Railway News and Statistics show that the safest way to travel is by railroad. In a year's operation of Canadian and United States railroads only one passenger was killed out of a total of 469,048,529 persons carried a total of 10,941,246,109 miles.

A Canadian inter-collegiate ski meet, unique development in Eastern Canada as far as ski-ing is concerned, will be held at the Seignior Club, Montebello, end of January. Gratification at the way in which the public is using the new rail "shuttle service" between Moose Jaw and Regina was expressed by H. R. Mathewson, general passenger agent, Canadian Pacific Railway, Winnipeg, when interviewed recently at Regina.
